Evotec History

Evotec commenced operations in Sydney in 1988, as PHC Voice and Data Engineering. The company was focused on cabling infrastructure solutions. In 1991, a sister company, Telephone Solutions, was established, specialising in the design and deployment of PABX hardware and applications.

In 1995, PHC Computers was established, installing and supporting network and desktop PC solutions. In 2001, PHC Voice and Data Engineering, Telephone Solutions and PHC Computers merged, forming Evotec. Our name was derived from “evolving technologies”, highlighting our commitment to understanding new technologies and their ability to improve our customers’ businesses. A period of diversification followed the merger, with operations expanding to cover Telstra carriage solutions and guest broadband solutions.

During 2001, Evotec’s operations were expanded to Melbourne, and in 2005, to Brisbane. The company’s Sydney, Melbourne and Brisbane offices are complemented by a national partner network, allowing our customers to rely on sales and support throughout Australia. Today, our customers can select solutions from Business Telephone Systems, Information Technology, Carriage, Infrastructure, Broadband Solutions and Business Support.

We offer customers the ability to partner with a single technology provider for their complete requirements. We design solutions to suit our customers’ business objectives and offer businessgrade support levels to optimise their performance and business impact.
